This solo travel diary tells about Erika's real life journey in Europe for 3 months.

About the Author Erika was eighteen and a half when she started the trip. She wanted to take a gap year after she finished high school, and her parents supported her decision. It was uncommon for Asians to take a break for a whole year before going to university. At the age of 16 she had the opportunity to go on a solo trip to Portugal for a CISV summer camp as one of the two representatives for Indonesia. Erika wants to pursue a major in creative writing study for her university abroad. So she posted some proof of her writings on her blog ngigel.com, she also contributed a few writings to CLEO Indonesias online website. Erika's gap year is not over yet by the time this book is published. She had a one month and a half internship in Prima Santhi, an English course company in Bali from November to December 2016, helping the institution as an administration staff and a substitute teacher. On the second half of her gap year, she will help out in her parents company project in Banten province as well as learning Javanese tradition in Yogya, her mothers hometown.
