Fodor's : Fodor's Citypack Washington, D.C., 3rd Edition (Citypacks) before purchasing it in order to gage

whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Fodor's Citypack Washington, D.C., 3rd Edition (Citypacks):

Fodor's Washington D.C. Citypack is worth the money spent. When I needed research information on the Capitol for my next novel, I stumbled across this book online. I love it. There are surely books that contain more information, but for the purpose it serves, Fodor's is excellent. Physically, it's small, thin, lightweight, colorful, and laminated. This allows it to be carried in pocket or purse and used repeatedly at a moment's notice--not as a desk-bound reference tome. The laminated cover makes it durable. Feels cool too. The inside covers are a decent map of the key tourist spots, which is a nice supplement to the larger and more thorough pull-out map provided. The text is divided into color-keyed sections that list a brief history of the city, plus good tips on how-to, where-to, when-to, and why-to visit the choice locations, such as monuments, museums, gardens, restaurants, or entertainment hotspots. The text is clear and concise. I would pick up a Fodor's Travel Guide to any major city I visited without hesitation. --Christopher Bonn Jonnes, author of Wake Up Dead.

We toured D.C. with this citypack and can't imagine how others do not! The top 25 list helps organize what's best to see and do with a little historical background and info. for each destination/activity. There are sample walks and itineraries, as well as a detailed up-to-date city map. Oh my goodness, for [the price], you cannot beat these lightweight and extremely handy guides.

Convenient size--it will fit easily in your purse or back pocket, and a pull-out full-size city map of D.C. make this "Citypack" a good guide to the nation's capital. A lot of information is presented on landmarks, parks, and other points of interest. A "Where to..." section gives recommendations on food, shopping and entertainment. I highly recommend the Washington D.C. Citypack by Fodor's.
