We shout out the location of the city or town when we see it depicted in the movies or on TV. We can't help ourselves because it's OUR city, the city we love and have an intimate relationship with but here is this other person's take on it. This guy Janko's take on the city is very different from TV or movies or yours. His pictures are hauntingly familiar but disorientating. Looking at NY through Janko's eyes leaves the viewer no choice but to imagine where the photographer could possibly be standing. Uptown? The Bronx? Under a truck in Tribeca? It is an interactive, experiential sandwich of a book.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. book and gameBy Christian M.Point of View New York City is book and game in ones and is a very personal and individual view of one of the most fascinating American cities. Especially the different perspectives of the photos are breaking down this unseizable City into details. There are many pictures of NY we are used to watch and it doesn't matter if you have been there or not, but you won't find this type of pictures in this book. If you really like to discover the lovable corners of the city instead of watching thousand times published impressions you will have fun with this photo booklet.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. A Gem of a Little NYC Book...By ManyaA gem for anyone who lives, visits, will visit, or never be in NYC. Truly a "visual game" as I tried to find the familiar places, photographed from a different perspective. Small, hardcoverd book that puts a smile on my face each time I "play the game". Identifying the photos in the back of the book is satisfying after attempts to identify the place myself. Glad I discovered the book....great holiday gift!

"As the author of books on architecture, I note in Janko Puls a similar soul. His active and curious mind searches out the nooks and crannies, as well as the icons, of our wonderful town, in a most original way." Roxie Munro, author and illustrator, The Inside Outside Book of New York, A New York Times Best Illustrated Children's Book and a Time Magazine Best Children's Book of the Year "This is a beautiful book of beautiful photographs doubly engaging and amusing because of its gentle, charming interactive game. Further, it reminds all of us to take a little time to observe and to appreciate our fair surroundings." Susan L. Roth, illustrator of the New York Times bestseller Listen to the Wind "As a photographer, I'm particularly impressed by the idiosyncratic flair of the imagery. Janko Puls approaches the city with a wonderfully fresh eye a little reminiscent of Robert Frank and his all-time classic, The Americans." Bo Zaunders, writer and photographer, The New York Times Book, Smithsonian Magazine, Gourmet, National Geographic Traveler
