Dana Speer, Lorri Ely, Angela Scott : Portlandneighborhood's Guide to the Perfect Portland Weekend before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Portlandneighborhood's Guide to the Perfect Portland Weekend:

2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. PortlandNeighborhood's Guide to the Perfect Portland WeekendBy H. F.This book ROCKS! Absolutely insightful look into a town that is itself a gem. And the approach here is so different. They don't just tell you where to go to eat or where to stand for the best photo ops. Instead, they essentially outline the perfect weekend, assuming a variety of interests, and all we have to do is show up and be ready to have some fun!

Hottest ticket to Portland! Put that yawn away and get ready for a trip with PortlandNeighborhood.com's weekend guide to Portland, Oregon. But if you're looking for boring, colorless listings of restaurants and attractions that drone on and blur in abstraction, you might just want to bend your elbow the other direction and set this volume down. This just isn't that book. Rather, the pages here read like a friend having taken you by the arm, inviting and guiding you into and through the Portland that makes Portland tick and that Portlanders themselves call home. Using themed weekend itineraries based on interest types to make the city more mentally accessible, PortlandNeighborhood's Guide to the Perfect Portland Weekend is like a backstage pass to what makes Portland a rock star!

From the Author We love Portland, and it shows! Featuring many of Portland's favorite restaurants, businesses, places to stay, and things to do--we've made Portland more fun and accessible for everyone. We've read every single guide book to Portland and have found nothing that comes even close to what we have been able to capture in this tell-all guide to your perfect Portland weekend. We've left no stone unturned in our research and promise even a long-term Portlander will discover something new and fascinating about our fabulous city. About the Author We are longtime Portland locals on a mission: to enjoy and promote our Portland neighborhoods and the independent businesses, artists, and neighbors who thrive in them. Dana Speer has worked as a fulltime film and television writer for ten years. When Dana arrived here from her home in Long Beach, California, she found herself suddenly in a passionate panic to uncover it all. That moment, there and then, she began exploring this city of roses, this city of bridges, this city of beer, this city of smiles. She didn't comb the streets. She scoured them, over and over, back and forth, as many as she could lay her feet on. The problem was, however, she had nowhere near enough people to tell about the treasure she was unearthing like some cosmopolitan anthropologist. Then she found PortlandNeighborhood.com and two women of like mind who had been infected with Portland in exactly the same way. Now, lucky her, Dana finds that, via the website and works like PortlandNeighborhood's Guide to the Perfect Portland Weekend, she is engaged in a dialogue with an entire city, a city she dearly loves and a city whose story she desperately wants to learn and share. Lorri Ely founded PortlandNeighborhood.com after moving to Portland from the Midwest and falling in love with the Pacific Northwest and the city of Portland. Each Portland neighborhood seemed to have its own unique personality, so the website was designed with a neighborhood perspective in mind. Responding to website emails from Portlanders and visitors prompted the idea for a unique Portland travel book. People seemed to be thirsting for more ideas on what was the best thing to see and do in Portland. It seemed like the uniqueness of Portland deserved more than a boring travel guide with a simple list of places to go. Many of the ideas in this book are simply a result of a love affair with Portland; as Lorri explores the city she continues to discover more wonderful things to see and do, and thus many of the seeds of ideas for perfect weekends were planted. Angela Scott is a co-founder of PortlandNeighborhood.com and shares a passion for this wonderful city. A decade long resident of Portland, and originally from Iowa, Angela escaped the endless sea of corn fields and made the 1700 mile hop to Portland seemingly on a whim. The truth is, a consulting gig and a deep desire to eat something other than meat and `taties was well worth the risk of landing in a new city sight unseen. "After one look, I knew it: I'll never leave," she said. The truth is, after discovering Portland you couldn't have convinced her there was another place in the world she was more suited for. Exploring Portland is a passion, and many of Angela's personal favorite Portland haunts appear throughout this book.
