Henry P. Dowst : Random Notes of Boston (Illustrated Edition) (Dodo Press) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Random Notes of Boston (Illustrated Edition) (Dodo Press):

Henry Payson Dowst (1876-1921) was an American novelist and short-story writer. After his graduation from Harvard in 1899 he devoted himself to the writing of fiction and advertisement. He was the General Manager of the Boston publishing house Maynard Co. In 1916 he worked for a New York advertising agency, Frank Seaman, Inc., where he remained until his death. Dowst was a prolific contributor of short stories and novelettes to magazines like The Saturday Evening Post, People's Favorite Magazine, and Argosy All-Story Weekly. At least one of his stories was co-authored with his wife Margaret Starr Dowst whom he married in 1900. Some of his short stories and novels were filmed. Dowst died at the age of 45 at the very height of his writing career. Amongst his works are: Random Notes of Boston (1913), Radcliffe College (1913), Bostwick's Budget (1920) and The Man from Ashaluna (1920).
