As I read it and felt the hopelessness of these faithful pioneers and yet the faith and trust in God that they would make it - somehow. I put myself in their position and wonder if I could make it through the trials that they endured, especially with little children. I love the men that put themselves out to rescue these people that could not make it another day. I love the women that were at home preparing for these poor starving, cold and miserable saints to come in so they could take care of them in a loving meaningful way. I love the preparation, the sacrifice, the determination of sending wagon after wagon out to find them and then trust in the Almighty God that the saints would be found and cared for. I loved the story of the inspiration, the guidance and the direction that was given so the rescuers could find those that needed them.All of this in the dead of winter with snow, cold, sleet and miserable condition. And then I wept with joy as only a person would/could in seeing help arrive when hope was fading fast. The joy of overwhelming gratitude that prayers had been answered and that God indeed had not forsaken them. It is truly an amazing story.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Great historyBy

Drifter You gotta love this book! It brings to life the real life trials of traveling 1300 miles across pretty untamed wilderness. And pulling a giant wheelbarrow to boot. Good read!!!!!!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful.
Five Stars By James Bird Very good reading.
